The Professor—In 140 wasps' nests there are an average of 25,000 insects.

The Student—Why, professor, I disturbed just one nest one day, and I'll bet there were more than 25,000 in that one!

The Heirloom.

A Pittsburgh drummer in a small town dropped into a place to get a bite to eat. The place looked familiar, but he didn't know the proprietor.

"Been running this place long?" inquired the drummer.

"No; I just inherited it from my father."

"Ah, yes. I knew him. I recognize this old cheese sandwich on the counter."

She Was a Duster.

Mrs. Sutton advertised for a woman to do general housework, and in answer a colored girl called, announcing that she had come for the position.

"Are you a good cook?" asked Mrs. Sutton.

"No, indeed, I don't cook," was the reply.

"Are you a good laundress?"

"I wouldn't do washin' and ironin'; it's too hard on the hands."

"Can you sweep?" asked Mrs. Sutton.

"No," was the positive answer. I'm not strong enough."

"Well," said the lady of the house, quite exasperated, "may I ask what you can do?"

"I dusts," came the placid reply.—Everybody's.

SALLOW FACES

Often Caused by Tea and Coffee Drinking.

How many persons realize that tea and coffee so disturb digestion that they produce a muddy, yellow complexion?

A ten days' trial of Postum has proven a means, in thousands of cases, of clearing up a bad complexion.

A Washn. young lady tells her experience:

"All of us—father, mother, sister and brother—had used tea and coffee for many years until finally we all had stomach troubles, more or less."

"We all were sallow and troubled with pimples, bad breath, disagreeable taste in the mouth, and all of us simply so many bundles of nerves."

"We didn't realize that tea and coffee caused the trouble until one day we ran out of coffee and went to borrow some from a neighbor. She gave us some Postum and told us to try that."

"Although we started to make it, we all felt sure that we would be sick if we missed our strong coffee, but we tried Postum and were surprised to find it delicious."

"We read the statements on the pkg., got more and in a month and a half you wouldn't have known us. We all were able to digest our food without any trouble, each one's skin became clear, tongues cleared off, and nerves in fine condition. We never use anything now but Postum. There is nothing like it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

ADAPTING THE PANIER

PARISIAN IDEA ADOPTED, WITHOUT UNDUE EXAGGERATION.

Result Has Been Gracefulness Combined With Novelty—Best Adapted for the Slim, Well-Turned Woman—Suggestion.

Midsummer finds a marked increase in panier effects, but the most approved models are still without any of the exaggeration the name might suggest. The puffing of the tunics is for the most part very low down, so that the overdress only differs from others in the gathering in of the bottom line. Various devices are used to achieve the slight puffing over the trimming band, but sometimes the cut is all that is needed, a little more depth at the sides of the overdress than at the back or front making the slight bulging desired. For these conservative models, as well as for those with the fullness at the hips or slightly lower, the softest fabrics are used so that the lines of the figure are still very graceful. It is quite plain from all the arrangements of the

SUITABLE COVER FOR CHAIR

Preserves Freshness of Upholstery, and is Easily Slipped On or Removed.

Chairs that are upholstered with delicate materials should at ordinary times be kept covered up if they are to retain their freshness and newness.

We give, therefore, a sketch of a very useful type of cover for an ordinary chair, that may be easily slipped on or removed.

It must, of course, be made to fit the chair it is intended for, and can be carried out in cretonne of some pretty pattern and bound at the edges panier that gracefulness is still far more desired than novelty, and so it comes about that women who never believed it possible to wear these draperies are yet wearing them, and sometimes look better than they did in the plain skirts. With every species of panier tunic the underskirt is still very scant, and the figure seems to get an added youthfulness from the puffed overdress. But the panier has its limitations. Only slim, well-turned women can wear it with any degree of smartness; on others, the chunky figures or the ones too tall for the piquant detail, paniers seem something of an absurdity.

In line and dignity and a certain gentle softness, the costume illustrated offers splendid suggestions for mourning, and the dress seems likewise suited to the matron, both youthful and middle aged. The model, too, gives one of the best ideas for using up old materials as before mentioned—for making the underslip—while the straight drapery and flou allow for the remnants of lace and embroidered chiffon flouncing now sold so cheaply.

With perfectly new materials for this style, if expense is no great drawback, a white satin slip veiled with black chantilly or shadow lace would be exquisite for a matron. Vellings and silk could also be used together, or net and silk, or foulard by itself. The small drawing shows the high bodice and trained skirt which many women above the age for the gayer sides of fashion would prefer for both indoors and gala occasions at other homes. Lastly lingerie materials are quite adaptable to the design, and a fine mull flouncing either in black or white would look extremely well if made up in this manner.

OSTRICH RUFF IS BECOMING

Pretty Fashion Almost a Necessity With the Present Low-Necked Smart Frocks.

As a change from Robespierre collars, or big Toby frills, the short ostrich ruff is the most becoming thing one can place round one's throat. In black, in white, or pale grey, tied with a knot of soft ribbon under one ear, it is ideal with a tailor-made costume, and is almost a necessity in the late afternoons with the low necks of our smart frocks. White marabout is pretty, too, and not ruinously expensive, but it must be the full marabout plume and not the little scrubby bits that make so many cheap bouff.

One of the most effective toilettes seen was a black taffetas coat and skirt, with a wide sailor collar of fine white net edged with lace, and the wearer had one of these short ostrich feather ruffs round her neck and a very fine white lace veil pinned round her large black hat.

with braid chosen of a color perhaps, to match that in the design on the cretonne.

The diagram on the right hand side shows the cover spread out quite flat, and for the portion marked "A," a double thickness of material is used so that it can be slipped over the back of the chair (much in the same way that a cosy is placed upon a teapot), and will protect both back and front. The portion indicated by "B" should be of the same size as the seat of the chair, and "CC" and "C" fit over the sides of the seat.

In the large sketch the cover is shown just loosely placed over the chair and it also illustrates the tapes that are provided for tying the cover securely round the legs of the chair.

This style of cover serves equally well to cover a shabby chair, as to protect a nice one, and there are so many pretty washing cretonnes now to be had that look most effective for the purpose.

To Perfume Lingerie.

The small articles that are washed at home may be most daintily perfumed if a small piece of orris root is added to the water they are boiled in. It may seem an undertaking to boil these, but if the handkerchiefs are placed in an enameled saucepan sufficiently large to hold them and the water necessary, they can be boiled quite well over a spirit lamp or paraffin stove. They need only be boiled for ten minutes. If, however, the articles are tinted, and cannot be treated in this way, boil a small piece of orris root in the water and use it for rinsing the blouses, handkerchiefs, etc. When dry they will be most daintily perfumed with a faint odor of violets.

RASH ALMOST COVERED FACE

Warrenville, O.—"I have felt the effects of blood poisoning for eighteen years. I was never without some eruptions on my body. The terrible itching caused me much suffering and discomfort, while the rubbing and scratching made it worse. Last spring I had a terrible breaking out of bilious sores on my arms and limbs. My face and arms were almost covered with rash. I could not sleep and lost nineteen pounds in five weeks. My face was terribly red and sore, and felt as if my skin was on fire. At last I tried a sample of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and I found them so cool, soothing and healing, that I got some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Resolvent. I bathed with hot water and Cuticura Soap, then I applied the Cuticura Ointment every night for two months, and I am cured of all skin eruptions." (Signed) Mrs. Kathryn Kraft, Nov. 28, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32 p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Making Cheese in Olden Days.

Cheese was made by the old-time farmers in the summer on the co-operative plan by which four cattle owners owning say 14 milk cows, received all the milk night and morning, according to the daily yield of their little herd. Thus given two families having five cows each, one with three and one with one, supposing that the average yield per cow was the same, in two weeks, two owners would make five cheeses each; one would press three, and one only one cheese, but this one would be as good and as large as any of the rest.—"Nobility of the Trades—The Farmer," Charles Winslow Hall, in National Magazine.
